

Report to proper authorities the perpetrators of discrimination, assault and violent acts against COVID-19 positives, PUIs, PUMs, returning OFWS, health service workers, and other frontliners, including other crimes and abuses to women and children.

Express gratitude to the health service workers for their hard work by giving them inspiring words, postcards, among other forms of encouragement.

Donate or conduct fund raising drive for the much needed medical and personal protective equipment, medical supplies and food for health service workers and other frontliners.

Provide relief goods and raise funds for people financially impacted by quarantine measures.

Combat misinformation online by reporting to the DOH hotline numbers in order to correct said misnomers and only get information from trusted sources like the World Health Organization (WHO) and the DOH.

Check in on elderly neighbors through text, phone call or email, especially if they live alone.

Reach out to people in self isolation or home quarantine by sending funny memes, gifts, postcards, call or video chat with them to cheer them up and make them feel less alone and have social support.

Offer to pick up and deliver their shopping, treats or other things they might need while taking precautions to keep yourself safe.

Join the “Oplan Hatid” campaign by providing transportation to COVID-19 affected persons in your locality from their residence to the hospital or to COVID-19 isolation facilities and for health service workers from their residence to hospitals where they are working.

Request or convince landlords from not ejecting COVID-19 frontliners from their living quarters.
